

It's Who, When, Why News!

Today, our host of WWW news, Violet Moon, will be interviewing a very special guest...

Give it up for Genghis Khan!

*Applause*

"Thank you, thank you everyone. Tonight we have a very special guest, all the way from the afterlife... Genghis Khan!"

*Applause*

"Thank you, it's great to be here."

"So Khan, we're going to ask a few questions about your life and you will answer them."

"Ok sounds good."

"Alright, question number one; what was your main goal in life?"

"I'd say, mainly it was having the most land and growing the army but overtime, that kind of turned into having the most power. You know, the more land you have the more power and respect you receive."

"Deep, deep. Okay, question number two; what would you consider to be your greatest achievement in life?"

“Well, conquering China was a pretty big hit, I mean, it’s no small country and after that, things kind of took off. I was pretty proud of our attack plans and tactics. Those trebuchets were a great idea if I do say so myself. And then replacing the rocks with explosives, I mean, how can you go wrong? But I was also pretty proud of my army and how we all kind of banded together to fight against China. We had been at war as long as I can remember but then, when we needed to fight against one force we united. I mean, yeah we kind of forced them to because we said we’d destroy their village if they didn’t but still. So, yeah, I’d probably say my greatest achievement was the actual conquering of China.”

“Nice, nice. Great answer. On to question number three. Where did you travel during your lifetime?”

“Oh, tons of places. Korea, all over Mongolia, places in Russia, Poland, Vietnam. I was actually born and raised on the steppes of Mongolia, near Siberia. Invasions never got old. A new place meant new land to obtain.”

“Fascinating. Fourth and final question; what do you regret not being able to experience after your death?”

“Well first of all, I felt pretty honored to be on the paper currency that Kublai Khan introduced.”

*Applause*

“Yeah, there’s a lot of things that were created in my honor which makes me feel pretty special, such as the Genghis Khan Equestrian Statue which I would have loved to gloat about. Also the Genghis Khan Mausoleum even though I’m a little disappointed that they didn’t burry me with all my valuables. That Qin Shi Huang loves to brag about all the stuff he’s got in the afterlife. And his fancy shmancy tomb that they started building when he was only thirteen. But anyway, I would have loved to see little Kublai defeating the Song dynasty and ruling the Empire at its largest.”

“Well isn’t that sweet. Unfortunately, that is all the time we have left folks.
Stay tuned for the interviewing of George Washington just after the ad break!”

“By the way what is this I am sitting on?”

“Oh, that’s called a chair.”

Thank You and Good Night!
